

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Michael L. Levin is an Executive-in-Residence at the Thunderbird School of Global Management, where he has provided international consulting, research, and advising for both the school and its multinational business clients.

Throughout his business career and education, Michael has lived and worked in Shanghai, Moscow, Hong Kong, Jerusalem, and Washington, DC. His occupational endeavors and thirst for knowledge typically found him working as a liaison between disparate companies and different countries. Levin's first-hand knowledge of the world and his big-picture view have allowed him to write this book with great clarity, scholarship and without portraying the United States as either the hero or the victim.

Levin's previous work experiences include a position at The Asian Wall Street Journal in Hong Kong, at Diagnostic Products Corporation in China and as a management consultant to the World Bank Project Coordination Unit in Moscow. Stateside jobs include positions with Symantec Corporation and Berlitz International.

Levin has a Master of International Public Policy degree from Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS), a Master of International Management degree from the Thunderbird School of Global Management, and a graduate degree in political science and a bachelor's degree in history from Roosevelt University. The author has also taken advanced courses in cross-cultural negotiations and public speaking.

Michael Levin is fluent in Russian and Hebrew and proficient in spoken Mandarin. He currently lives in Chicago, Illinois. The Next Great Clash is his first book.
